Submission deadline: 5 July 2020

Historia Agraria de América Latina (HAAL) announces a call for articles and book reviews for its second issue, to be published in November 2020.

HAAL is an academic, peer-reviewed journal published by the Centro de Estudios de Historia de América Latina (CEHAL, www.cehal.cl), an autonomous research center established in Santiago de Chile in 2017. HAAL aims to promote and disseminate research and interdisciplinary debate on the history of the rural societies of Latin America and the Caribbean. The journal prioritizes the publication of research that analyzes new topics and problems, makes theoretical and methodological contributions, and develops new interpretations. Manuscripts must be original and not in the process of being evaluated at another journal. HAAL also accepts manuscripts from economics, anthropology, political science, sociology and other disciplines that examine issues of rural society from a historical perspective. The journal publishes articles and book reviews in Spanish, English and Portuguese. It also publishes special editions with guest editors. Manuscripts are evaluated by the editors and subjected to double blind peer review. HAAL is published bi-annually (April and November) and is open access through the website: www.haal.cl

Article manuscripts and book reviews can be submitted in Spanish, Portuguese or English. Manuscripts must be fully anonymized, that is, free of any identifying information in both the text and notes. Articles should have a length of 8000 to 9000 words including notes and references and must be presented in accordance with the journal style guidelines. Book reviews should have a length of 1500 words, and must be written in formal, conceptual, and concise language. HAAL adopts the American Psychological Association's publication style, but also allows the use of footnotes.
